

Quality assessment

In the first project I used HTML without any styling, so it was just a normal website, the second part I used CSS so it was fun playing with the font, size, and colors. The third part was a bit challenging because I used a lot more things in CSS which I had to change the margins, padding, and so. For me the most appealing one was the second one, the third part contained too many colors which I personally didn't like. The visual appeal affects a lot in websites, I would attract to website well design and I would whether use it, buy, or save it. Visual appeal is an important aspect of website quality that may have a big influence on user behavior, engagement, and trust. A visually appealing website is vital for attracting and maintaining clients, eventually leading to higher sales and success when selling something online.
